No matter what kind of internet connection you have, streaming is one of the best options available to enjoy your favorite movies, TV shows, or sports events. However, all this is often made impossible because of security issues. Let's face it, hackers have been out to get all kinds of people since the dawn of time. The perfect way to counter these attacks is to encrypt the data that is being transferred over the Internet. Luckily, there are plenty of programs available that will make it easy for you to protect your online streams. Today, we're going to be looking at one of the best, Cyberlink. Cyberlink WebPlayer Cyberlink's WebPlayer is a streaming tool that offers you the opportunity to watch movies online through a variety of codecs. It offers a wide array of features that will do everything from adjusting to your speakers, to perfecting how movies are divided. This software will also leave you with a list of all the sites you have been using, so you know where to find them again when it's needed. With Cyberlink's WebPlayer, there are no ads or pop ups on any of the supported sites. The interface is fairly intuitive, and offers you the choice of whether you wish to use the full screen mode, or just a window. If full screen is your choice, you'll be able to adjust to your speakers and headphones. Cyberlink WebPlayer is compatible with all Windows platforms, and is offered for download at just $19.95. Cyberlink is offering a free license through July 1st, 2017. With this one app, Cyberlink gives you complete control over your video files, and if you're interested in streaming online video, you need to get to this software. It's easy to use, fun, and has a lot to offer. Cyberlink's WebPlayer gets a 9/10! Cyberlink Description: allows users to stream online through the most common codecs, comes with a fair collection of plugins, includes a remote administration function; users can encrypt b7e8fdf5c8

Neat first impression Questionable overall practicality Ease of use (3.0/5) Graphics (3.0/5) Price (3.5/5) Overall (3.7/5) A nice first impression, Internet Controller has some issues with its operation, and its overall usability. Point and click Internet Controller is an excellent tool that will help parents to block inappropriate and dangerous websites. The interface is also very usable and attractive. Internet Controller automatically detects the Internet connection and blocks access to designated domains or URLs. At the beginning, you are required to set a password which will be used for protection. You are also asked to specify the default settings. A list of designated URLs is presented and includes dozens of sites. You can add or remove sites and create your own list of websites. Internet Controller is also capable of blocking chat messaging and web browsing on the computer itself. You are required to enter the password to close protection and set the defaults. Unfortunately, Internet Controller allows to perform only simple functions. Some functions, like blocking of select pages, are not available. Internet Controller works with various web browsers, including Internet Explorer, Mozilla Firefox, Google Chrome and Safari. System Requirements For Internet Controller:

- System requirements are based on a range of factors, but if you know what you're doing and what you need, the following will suffice. - If you are planning to play in lower graphical settings, please ensure that you are running a recent version of the Battle for Wesnoth multiplayer client, as the Steam version supports a larger range of graphics. (We're planning on bringing the Steam version up to the same graphical standards as the standalone client, which is the version of the game you'll be getting on launch, though a Steam exclusive version is still to come)
